Fearful Explosion.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22.—With a flash and a roar the nitroglycerine house of the California Powder Works at Pinole blew up at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, and almost simultaneously the mixing-house, scarcely a hundred feet away, exploded with a cruel, sympathetic crash. Two great white clouds of smoke arose over the black holes torn in the ground, and when they rolled away the sun revealed the almost complete wreck of one of the biggest powder plants in the country. From over the hills the startled villagers came, some of them crying, for relatives who worked in the mill. When they reached the crest of the bluff which sheltered the buildings they beheld a woeful spectacle. Even the foundations of the nitro-glycerine house were gone and in their place was a black crater, from which ribbons of pungent smoke trailed slowly through the scorched leaves of a group of eucalyptus trees. Further to the right was the immense hole dug by the sympathetic explosion in the mixing house.

Scarcely a vestige of either building remained in these great holes. The wreckage was blown in every direction, and in the hurricane of broken metal and wood swept the torn and bleeding bodies of fifteen men. Five of these were reckoned as being among the most expert makers of high explosive in the country. The other ten poor creatures were Chinese.
